We appreciate your help and support in passing this historic ordinance that will make Marion County residents' lives healthier and our city more enjoyable for visitors. Indianapolis has now joined nearly 2,000 other communities who recognize secondhand smoke in the workplace as a deadly, public safety problem.

While this is a time for celebration, there is still much work left to be done to make all our citizens safe from the dangerous problem of smoking in the workplace. We look to you for continued support in allowing all Marion County residents to work in smoke-free environments.

We are confident that by working together we can make all Marion County workplaces smoke-free and safe for patrons, visitors and employees.
